Objective

Triggered by recent mass harm scandals with cross-border implications, notably Dieselgate, collective redress is back on the EU civil justice agenda.

In January 2020, negotiations on the new EU collective redress rules started between the Council and the European Parliament. The draft rules allow consumer organisations to seek remedy against trader violations in areas such as data protection, financial services, travel and tourism, energy, telecommunications, environment and health. The draft bill introduces the "loser pays principle" which is, like other issues, heavily debated.

This conference will:

- present the proposed EU Directive on representative actions for the protection of the collective interests of consumers
- provide a platform for debate on topical issues of this key Directive
- analyse major case law of the CJEU and national Supreme Courts on collective redress
- look at the mismatch of EU law and collective redress
- present most recent hands-on experience with collective redress
- debate funding issues, namely contingency fees and third-party funding.

Who should attend?

Legal practitioners specialised in the field of consumer law and policy; litigators who lead mass damage cases involving consumers, data protection or shareholders' claims; representatives of business and consumer organisations; ministry officials; academics.

Live Stream

If you cannot attend the conference in Trier, you can still join in online!

Online participants can address written questions to the panel through a live chat.
